THE POLLARDS

Vaudeville as presented by the Pollards made a real hit at the Opera House last night. In this line of the show business the young actors are at their very best and the audience was with them from first to last.

Where the beauty of the performance came in was that each of the performers had something to do that they knew how to do well. They can all sing, they can all dance and they all have a special line of funny business that is scheduled for a hit every time it is put on.

The Pollards, one and all, showed the very best of humor and comedy that is in them and the result was really good. There were two skits and a dozen or more acts in which the good little people appeared in songs, dances and specialty stunts.

The opening skit was a funny little affair in which Alfred Goulding shows how to get rid of a mother-in-law. His methods seemed to please the audience very well and then the curtain went up on the first of the song specialties.

This was one in which Ada Hind appeared in her clever "Meet Me at the Bodega" song with the mirror effect and it made even more of a go than it did in the "Charity Ball." From then on there was a rapid succession of clever stunts, each one seeming to please the audience a little more than the one before.

Teddie McNamara was very good in his coter song. It is not hard for him to twist his tongue to the real cockney accent and his gestures and acting with the song were very good.

Eva Moore was more charming than ever when she sang "Glow worm" and "Moon Dear" and the effective lift of the music set off her pleasing voice splendidly. Goulding was extremely clever in his imitations of Harry Lauder, the great Scotch comedian, and his accent was just as realistic as the original.

The second part of the show ended with Little Bull's swing song. This was another big hit and the little actress had to come out and respond to numberless encores.

The finishing skit "The Fall of Poor Arthur" was one of those apparently aimless affairs that simply gives everybody a chance to be funny and they were funny. Alfred Goulding made up as an exaggerated snail, kept the house laughing all the time. Teddie McNamara, in the same kind of a rig, was just about as funny, and the way they frolicked about the stage and got in some clever work every minute, was great to see.

Pollard vaudeville is good. The young actors are at their very best in this kind of work and they put on a show last night that nobody should miss when it is reproduced later in the week.

There will be no matinee on Wednesday, but an evening performance of "Checkers" Thursday night and Saturday matinee and evening there will be more vaudeville with changes each night.

WATERFRONT NOTES

THE INTER-ISLAND steamer Mauna Kea and Mauna Loa left at noon today for Maui and Hawaii ports. They were both given good send-offs by the Hawaiian band, which played at the Mauna Kea wharf. The passengers were decorated with leis, which their relatives and friends brought for them. Among the passengers who left in the ship Mauna Kea was the Hon. H. L. Holstein, Speaker of the House of Representatives. Senator Dowsett, director of the Inter-Island fleet, also sailed in her.

THE OIL-SHIP Marion Chilcott sailed yesterday afternoon for Gaviota. As soon as her tanks have been filled with oil she will return again to this port, arriving some time in June.

THE KINAU will sail this afternoon at 5 o'clock for Kauai. She will carry a big load of freight and will return on Saturday with sugar, which has been accumulating on Kauai.

THE LITTLE steamer Noeua, which goes to the Koolau side of Kauai, will depart this afternoon at 5 o'clock. She will possibly take explosives.

THE MAUI sailed at noon today for Paahau, Mahukona and other ports on Hawaii. She took no passengers.

THE MIKAHALA, which goes to Molokai, Maui and Lanai, will leave at 5 o'clock today.

And fall alike on man and boy;
But not when on the walk they lie,
And I'm the man behind the shovel.
